comments. Recent support for the role of HIV-related stigma in the HIV epidemic has fostered interest in identifying and implementing stigma prevention measures.

Although there is general agreement that HIV-related stigma is detrimental to the mental health of those stigmatized, there is an important question as to how HIV-related stigma is related to psychological well-being and mental health in the context of a community-based prevention strategy. As such, understanding what explains psychological well-being among those who have been exposed to HIV-related stigma is critical to the development of effective stigma reduction interventions for men who have sex with men (MSM) with higher HIV prevalence. The purpose of this study is to examine the
